Dear Sirs,

I am writing to you regarding workplace smoking limitations. Enough is truly enough. I am beginning to feel that government agencies want to increase their control over my business. That's not right.

We small businesses already pay high taxes, so we don't need the burden of new regulations like the ones you are considering. The government seems to want to take money out of my pocket by making me turn away customers who smoke. It's no longer a smoking issue, but it's about freedom of choice and my right to run my place of business the way I see fit.

If I have to comply with these rules, I will either lose all of my best customers, or go out of business, or both. As a voter in the U.S. I am asking you not to adopt any additional cigarette or smoking regulations.

Sincerely,

Dave Gewirtz
